

The Chinese Communist Xiang Jingyu was martyred on May Day of 1928. The preeminent female cadre of her time, Xiang was the 16-year-old daughter of a merchant when imperial China fell in 1911. She came of age, and radicalized, in the tumultuous aftermath, becoming an early advocate for women's liberation as an essential objective of the revolution.

Xiang Jingyu (1895-1928) was a pioneer of the women's liberation movement, who founded China's national women's organization. In the 1920s, Xiang Jingyu was engaged in the women's liberation movement, primarily in Shanghai, but also in Beijing (Peking) and Guangzhou (Canton). In charge of the publication "Women's Review," she was also ...

Dielectric and antiferroelectric materials are particularly promising for high-power energy storage applications. However, relatively low energy density greatly hinders their usage in storage technologies. Here, we report first-principles-based calculations predicting that epitaxial and initially nonpolar AlN/ScN superlattices can achieve an ultrahigh energy density of up to ...

Xiang Jingyu, born on this day in 1895, was one of the earliest female members of the Communist Party of China (CPC) and a pioneer of the women's movement of China. She was executed by Guomindang police on May 1st, 1928. Xiang Jingyu was politically radicalized when she attended the Montargis Women's University in France. While studying there ...

Comrade Xiang Jingyu Memorial, located at Xupu County of Hunan Province, is a museum in memory of Xiang Jingyu, a pioneer of woman emancipation movement. The memorial used to be the administration office of Xiang Jingyu's former residence, opened to the public on July 1, 1981. On September 4, 1985, the name was changed into the present one.

Xiang Jingyu was born in 1895 in Hunan province, in a little village near the provincial capital. This province had a firmly anchored tradition of modernism, most notably in the area of education. Xiang was the ninth child in a family of ten children. Her father, a former peddler who had made it rich, took care that his children were educated.

Xiang Jingyu was a Chinese politician and women's rights activist. She was recognized by Chairman Mao Zedong as the sole female founder of the Communist Party of China. Born into a rich family in 1895 in Xupu, Hunan Province, Xiang had 10 brothers and sisters. Her original name was Xiang Junxian which she changed after attending school.
